

Dear Sardis family,

Praise God this weekend my Juvy team in Thailand lead a very successful 3 day camp, culminating with 4 girls getting baptized on Sunday.

In the midst of COVID and lockdowns and what seems at times like closed doors God is moving and his Spirit continues to soften hearts and set captives free.

The team just heard they might not be able to go in for a while again, as news of new COVID cases have appeared. Pray they will still be able to put on the Christmas event that has already been planned for the girls and the guards.

Pray for our national team leader Siriwan who leads the Naomi House church plant and ministry that provides skill training and discipleship for refugee women. Pray for continued courage, vision and discernment as she provides leadership, encouraging unity and faith among a diverse group of refugee women and their families. There are many spiritual battles; the enemy is not pleased to see a growing church plant, faithfully witnessing and proclaiming the Good News in the midst of a pandemic and lost economic opportunities.

Thank you for praying for my teammates daughter JJ. It's truly a miracle, she is off all meds and starting to be at school a few hours a day accompanied by her mom.

Pray for Maceo and I as we long to return to Thailand by February. Prayer for the extra funds we need to raise to make that return possible in light of Thailand's strict entry and quarantine rules. Pray for the Lord's favour over all the paperwork and legal hurdles we still face. Most importantly pray for our hearts to be at peace, to trust and receive new revelation from the Father as we wait.

Thank you for your continued support, love and friendship.

Love Cynthia and Maceo
